Questions for the owner: magazine pages, QR codes and offers

513 Auto Clean, November 11. About 10 minutes. Each question has a recommended answer: tick it, or write your own. With these answers, the two magazine pages, their QR codes and the tracking can be built straight away. Nothing here can be built correctly without them.

What gets built once you answer:

- Two short pages, one per magazine (for example 513autoclean.com/golf and /prestige). Each is written for that magazine's readers and ends in the booking form.
- A QR code for each, pointing at its page, as print-ready PNG and SVG files.
- Tracking from scan to booking. The site already notes which magazine sent a visitor and puts it in the booking email. Analytics adds scans and visits. "Where did you hear about us?" at checkout catches people who type the address or call.
- A simple report per magazine: visits, bookings and revenue, so you can see what each ad earned.

The magazines

1. Which magazines, and when do they reach readers? The page names the magazine, and an offer's end date depends on when the issue lands.

- [ ] Golf magazine: full name _____, issue date _____
- [ ] Prestige Living: issue date _____
- [ ] Another: _____

Recommended: both, with each issue's date, so each offer ends about 6 weeks after its issue lands.

2. When is the artwork deadline, and who makes the ad? The QR code has to be in the ad file before it goes to print.

- [ ] Deadline: _____
- [ ] The magazine designs the ad (we send the QR file)
- [ ] You or a designer make it (we send the QR file)
- [ ] We make a simple ad layout too

Recommended: we send a high-resolution QR file the day you answer, and the magazine places it.

3. What should the web addresses be? They should be short enough to type, for anyone who won't scan.

- [ ] 513autoclean.com/golf and 513autoclean.com/prestige
- [ ] Other: _____

Recommended: /golf and /prestige.

The offer

4. Should each magazine have its own offer? An offer gives readers a reason to book now. A code unique to each magazine also counts bookings from people who never scan. Your current codes are LIKENEW (10%

off) and FRIANDFAM (25%, friends and family).

- [ ] No offer, just the page
- [ ] 10% off, each with its own code (GOLF10, PRESTIGE10)
- [ ] A free extra with the first detail (which one? _____)
- [ ] A set amount off, e.g. $25 off a Full Interior
- [ ] Other: _____

Recommended: 10% off with a code for each magazine. It's simple, it matches LIKENEW, and it measures each ad even when nobody scans.

5. Limits on the offer.

- [ ] Ends on: _____
- [ ] First detail only, one per customer
- [ ] Works with the 10% multi-vehicle saving
- [ ] Never combines with another code (true today: one code per booking)

Recommended: ends 6 weeks after the issue lands, first detail only, one code per booking, and still works with the multi-vehicle saving.

6. Should the magazine offer skip the rush fee? In cold months, most exterior and combined jobs can only be booked inside the 3-day rush window (question 18 explains why). So readers who want an exterior detail would pay the 20% rush fee on top of the offer. If you pick an answer to question 18 that fixes it for everyone, this one is answered too.

- [ ] Keep the rush fee as it is
- [ ] No rush fee on exterior bookings more than 1 day out (for everyone)
- [ ] No rush fee when the weather is what limits the dates
- [ ] Magazine codes skip the rush fee

Recommended: no rush fee on exterior bookings more than 1 day out. It's fair to every customer, not just magazine readers, and it stops winter exterior jobs from always costing 20% more.

The readers and the page

7. Who reads each magazine, and what should each page lead with?

- [ ] Golf: lead with _____ (e.g. "detailed at your home while you get on with your day", ceramic coating, convenience)
- [ ] Prestige Living: lead with _____ (e.g. Showroom Ready, paint correction, "we come to your home")
- [ ] Packages to feature: _____

Recommended:

- Golf: "Detailed at your home or office while you get on with your day", featuring Full Interior and Full Exterior.
- Prestige Living: "Showroom Ready, at your door", featuring Showroom Ready. Paint correction is shown as coming soon.

8. Can you detail in a golf club's parking lot? The golf page should only promise this if it's true. It may need the club's permission.

- [ ] Yes, at any club
- [ ] Only at these clubs: _____
- [ ] No, homes and offices only

Recommended: leave clubs out unless you have permission. "At your home or office" is always true.

9. Photos and reviews.

- [ ] Use the photos already on the site
- [ ] I'll send new photos: _____
- [ ] Feature these reviews or customers: _____

Recommended: the site's before-and-after photos and Google reviews now; swap in new photos later.

Tracking and cost

10. Calls and texts from readers. Many will call instead of booking online.

- [ ] Ask "Where did you hear about us?" (already at checkout)
- [ ] A separate phone number per magazine through GoHighLevel (tracks calls automatically)
- [ ] Ask on the phone and note it yourself

Recommended: the checkout question now, plus a GoHighLevel number per magazine once GoHighLevel is connected.

11. What did each ad cost? This turns visits and bookings into return on investment.

- Golf ad: $_____
- Prestige Living ad: $_____

Flagged for your review: the rush fee on exterior jobs

18. Our booking rules make most exterior and combined jobs pay the rush fee in cold months, without anyone meaning them to. (Flagged November 11.)

- Why it happens: an exterior detail needs dry, warm enough weather, so the form only offers exterior times inside the weather forecast, about a week ahead, and only on days that pass. The rush fee (+20%) applies to any booking within 3 days. In winter the passing days are often the next few, so the customer's only exterior times carry the fee. They pay 20% more for a limit set by the weather, not because they asked to be fitted in.
- Who it hits: every Full Exterior and every interior-and-exterior combination, including magazine readers using an offer code (question 6).
- Options:
  - [ ] Keep it as it is
  - [ ] No rush fee on exterior bookings more than 1 day out (for everyone)
  - [ ] No rush fee when the weather is what limits the dates
  - [ ] Other: _____

Recommended: no rush fee on exterior bookings more than 1 day out. It's simple to explain, fair to every customer, and still charges for genuine next-day fitting in.

Other decisions waiting on you (short)

12. Calendar titles. Should only upper-case `OPEN` and `BEST` count as working hours and best times? Today, an event titled "Open house party" would also count as working hours. Recommended: yes, upper case only.

13. A detailer with no OPEN events at all. Today they're offered 5am to 1am every day (for example, Kris on holiday with his OPEN events deleted). Recommended: no OPEN events means no bookings for that detailer.

14. Rain and paint correction. "Any rain" is treated today as more than 0.25 mm an hour. Recommended: keep it; a few drops shouldn't cancel a booking.

15. Kris's email, to share his bookings calendar with him.

16. GoHighLevel: the account's API key and location ID, plus whether texting (A2P registration) is approved. Reminders and texts through GoHighLevel can't be connected without these.

17. How far ahead can customers book online? The live site takes bookings up to a year ahead, and the new booking form does the same for now. A shorter limit (for example 3 months) stops bookings so far out that plans, prices or hours may have changed by then. Anything further ahead can still be arranged by phone.

- [ ] Keep one year, as today
- [ ] 3 months
- [ ] Other: _____

Recommended: keep one year until you have a reason to shorten it; your OPEN events already decide which days can actually be booked.
